

Out & About with Lori Sunflower

Who is a Crestonian you're grateful for and why?

James O'Dea

I am so very grateful to Signe Ramstrom for organizing an International Peace Day commemoration every year here in Crestone; for her amazing classical Indian dance performances--- not to mention her generous gifting of home grown greens and gourmet desserts.

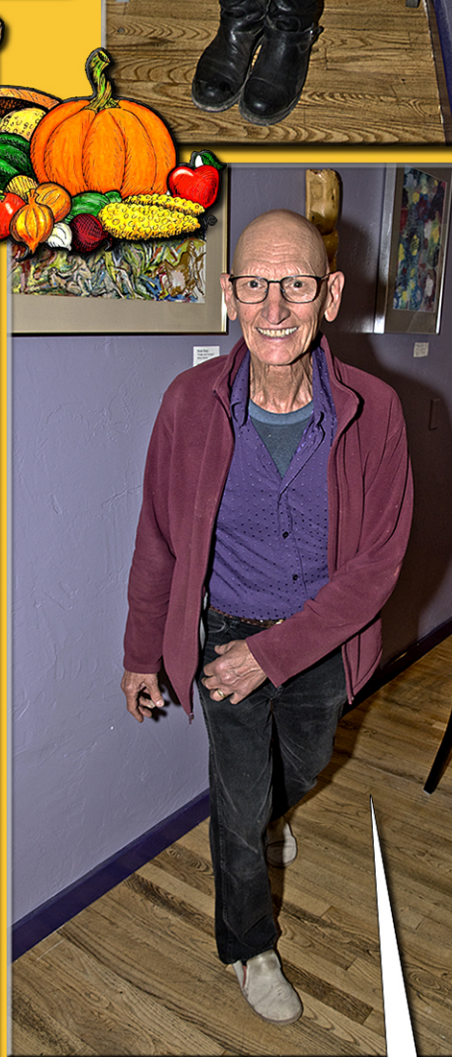

Liza Marron

I want to appreciate and lift up Nick Chambers. He's a hero to me. He's created this amazing food aggregation and distribution system where we can rely on a food system that comes from our neighbors family farms and ranches. And that's how we nourish our children in the schools, in our grocery stores, in our restaurants. I'm so thankful for him.

Brett Sherrick

I am so grateful for Andrea Musgrave, my beautiful wife who I love so much, because she keeps me in line and direction and takes very good care of me. Anybody who knows me knows my story. And yes, that's all I need to say.

Paul Mannaioni

I'm grateful for this town because it's the only town that's ever accepted me. And I've made more friends and had more family faster than any place I've ever lived in my life.

Burt Wadman

There is a Crestonian for whom so much loving gratitude instantly wells up in response to this question. My person is goodness itself, his wit is a delight, his strength the quiet kind, his soul-inspired works divine, his conduct impeccable. The problem is I don't dare name him. It would be wrong, and an offense to his modesty. Let's just say such Crestonians do exist, and be grateful for that.

Noah Baen

It's just impossible for me to name just one or even a few persons. So many people in our community are doing so much in so many ways and so many levels. Let me just express deep gratitude for all the people at all the spiritual centers whose prayers are radiating through Crestone and out to the world.

Jandi Namba

I am grateful for Allison Wonderland and all the loving, caring, encouragement, laughter, deep understanding and great hugs she gives me. And especially for all the caregiving work and volunteering, both known and unknown, she does for the community.